Madeline Finn and the Library Dog

Young Madeline Finn is a struggling reader. No matter how hard she tries, she can't earn the gold star for a good day of reading aloud at school. But everything changes when she meets Bonnie, a big, fluffy dog at her library's "Read-to-Dogs" program. Bonnie is a good listener. She doesn't laugh when Madeline Finn reads slowly, or gets stuck on a word. Sometimes a good friend makes all the difference! And just maybe that gold star isn't out of reach after all.

Madeline Finn and the Shelter Dog

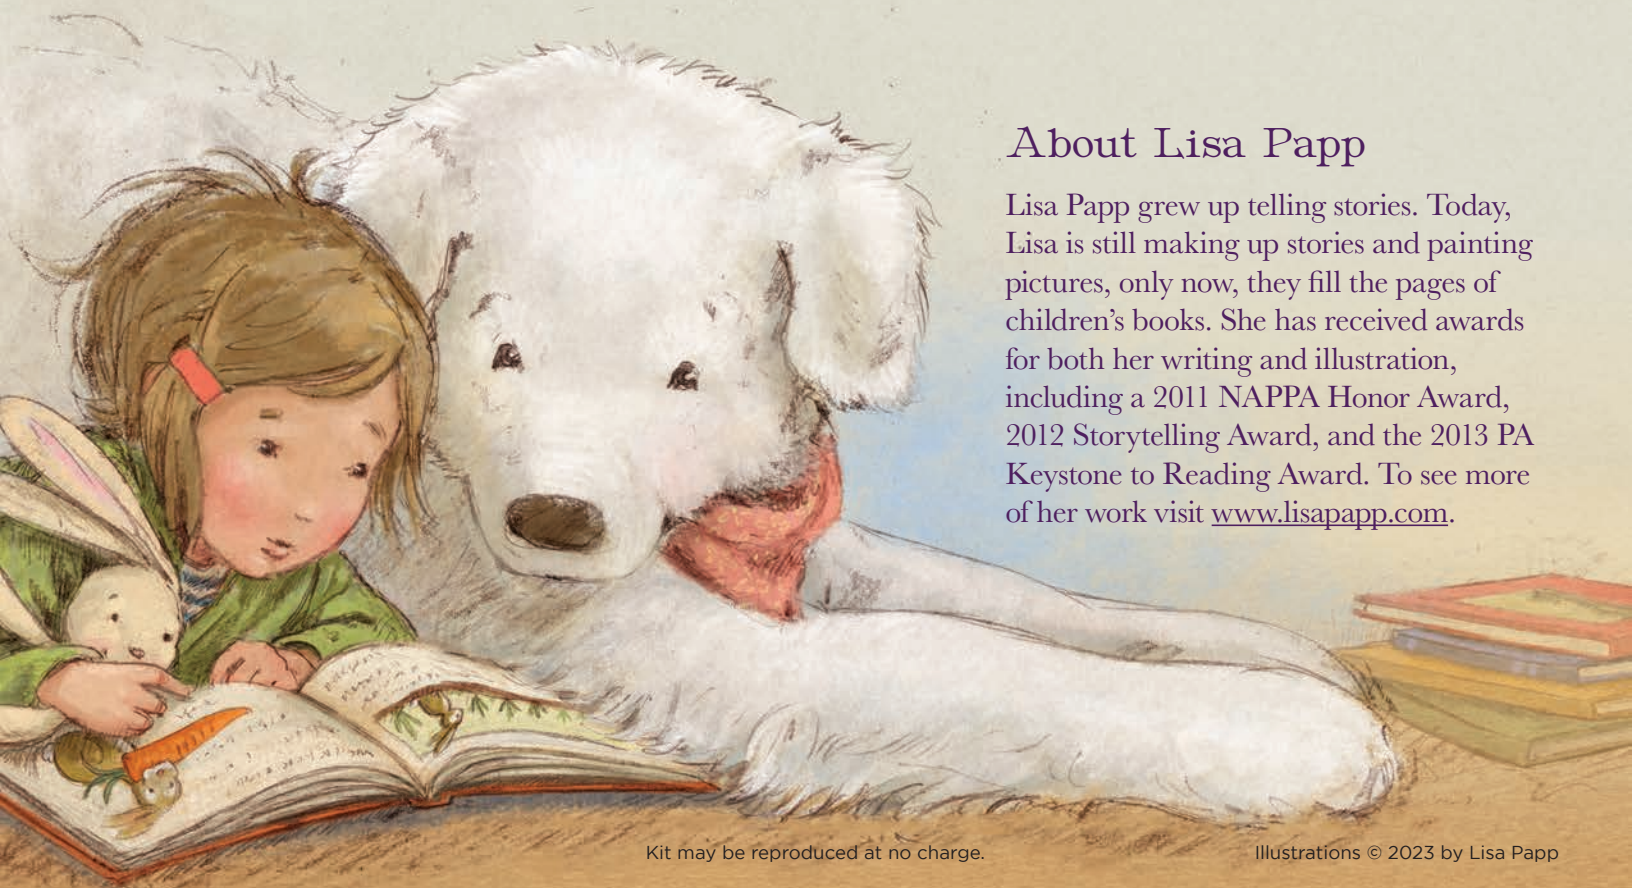

Madeline Finn wants a puppy all her own to love and care for. But when she visits the animal shelter, she sees that not all animals live the same way. Madeline Finn is determined to help the shelter dogs. But can she find a way to make each one feel special? With the help of some friends, and a few good books, she may discover that a small voice can make a big difference.

Madeline Finn and the Therapy Dog

Madeline Finn's puppy, Star, is practicing to become a therapy dog, just like Bonnie. But when they visit the retirement home where Star will take his tests, Madeline Finn finds a new challenge—the man in the corner who never smiles. Madeline Finn must learn what the dogs already know . . . the magic of accepting someone exactly as they are. Just like Bonnie did for her.

Madeline Finn and the Blessing of the Animals

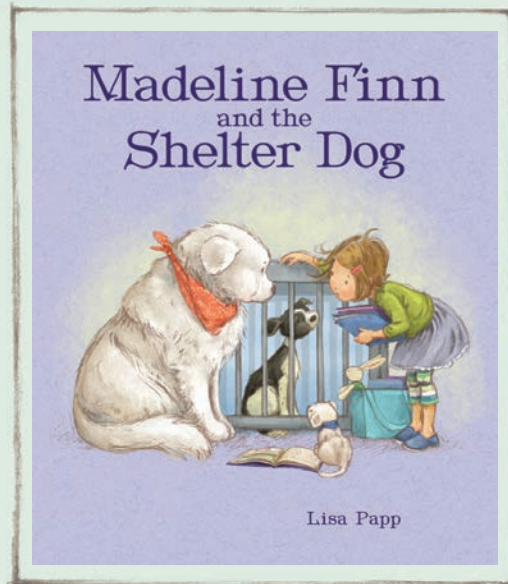

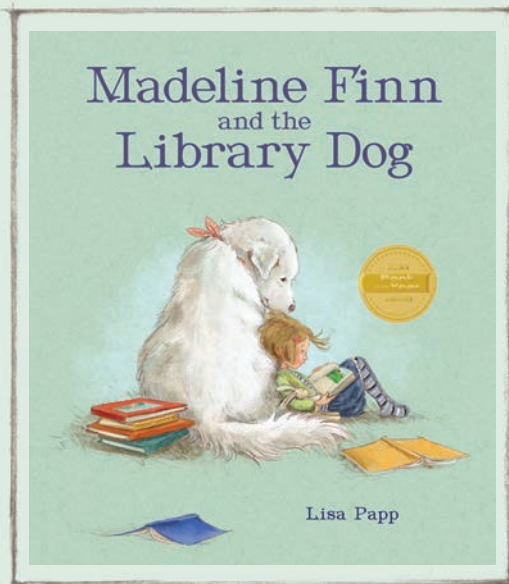

When Madeline Finn attends the Blessing of the Animals with Bonnie and Star, she learns that everyone has a gift inside, which they can share with the world. And one way that Madeline Finn can share her blessing is with the animals at her local shelter.

About Therapy Dogs

Therapy dogs visit libraries, hospitals, and schools. They visit nursing homes, and courthouses. Therapy dogs have even visited airports where they help passengers stay calm.

What is a therapy dog's job?

- to help people feel safe
- to let them know they're loved
- to remind them that they matter

To become a therapy dog, the dog and his handler must be certified. They must pass a series of tests. Good therapy dogs have calm, gentle personalities. They love to be petted. They are happy to lie down and hear a story. They must also be comfortable around other dogs since they are often working in groups.

Reading to Shelter Dogs

Many humane societies and animal shelters give volunteers the opportunity to read to their shelter animals. Often, animals are afraid when they arrive at a shelter. But hearing a calm, gentle voice helps them relax. They learn that it's okay to come to the front of the cage and interact with people. This is very helpful on adoption day!

Benefits of reading to shelter dogs:

- the animals are soothed by kind, gentle voices
- the animals are learning to trust again
- they are more adoptable which means they find their "Forever Homes" sooner

Does your local animal shelter offer a "Read to the Animals" program?
Why don't you find out?

What Kind of Dog Can Become a Therapy Dog?

“Mr. Chips”

All kinds of dogs can make good therapy dogs—big dogs, small dogs, shelter dogs.

In Madeline Finn and the Shelter Dog, you met Mr. Chips. He was adopted from a shelter by Peggy, a retired school librarian, and has been doing therapy work for 10 years! They make a wonderful team.

“Boots”

You’ve seen Boots in all three books. She was abandoned outside of a shelter, but when Gloria adopted her, she knew right away that Boots was special. They have been doing therapy work together for 6 years.

Fun Fact: Boots gets a “munchkin” donut as a treat on her way home from the library!

“Chloe”

This is Chloe. Chloe had three homes before finding her “Forever Home” when Bonnie adopted her. Chloe is 12 years old now and they have been doing therapy work together for almost 8 years.

Fun Fact: Chloe lives with two other therapy dogs, Frost and Mickey. Sometimes they come to the library all together to hear the kids read to them.

RECIPES

Ask an adult for help

Doggie Treats (peanut butter doggie cookies)

- 2 cups flour (white or wheat, if your pup has no wheat allergies)
- 1 cup rolled oats
- 1/3 cup smooth peanut butter
- 1 tbs. honey
- 1/2 tbs. fish oil
- 1-1/2 cups water

Mix the flour and oats in a large mixing bowl. Pour in 1 cup of water, and blend until smooth. Add in the peanut butter, honey, and fish oil. Mix until well blended.

Slowly add the remaining water until mixture has thick, doughy texture. Roll dough 1/4" thick on floured surface. Cut out with cookie cutters. Bake at 350° for 40 minutes. Cool completely before serving.
